This research is to know the autonomy of survivors on the dependence of aid and the unequal distribution. This research uses qualitative method of phenomenology. The subject is the survivors of Mount Kelud eruption. The investigation is in Desa Pandansari, Kecamatan Ngantang, Kabupaten Malang. Then, the data collection are observation of participants, interview, and documentation.

The result of the research show that the subject of the research in considering the autonomy does not depend on other people and rely on aid of donors but the survivors should strive hard in determining all things due to the aid is not given continually. In this research, the forms of autonomy are emotional autonomy, intellectual autonomy, economic autonomy, and social autonomy. Then, the supporting factors of autonomy are hope and social supports. The aid is the key in giving the cause of the dependence on the autonomy. Therefore, the survivors only rely on the aid and make them lazy to work and effort. In achieving the autonomy, the subject must to having plan or strong will.
