Wedding procession has ordinances that vary in each region. The procedure is sometimes motivated by beliefs about society, mindset, persona who started the procedure. Form of marriage procedures were also different, there are even different in terms of harmony, but some are only in terms of the Sunnah only. For example marriage ordinance that occurred in the village of Glagah district. Glagah, Kab. Lamongan. The procedure for a handshake during the ceremony.

This study used a qualitative approach, because in this study the data generated in the form of descriptive data obtained from the data in the form of writing, the words and documents originating from a source or informant who researched and credible.

The tradition of the handshake in the implementation of the ceremony is purely a habit that eventually became a tradition in the community Glagah. Handshake is a tradition carried out since the first and last from generation to generation until now.

Handshake also shows the meaning of sincerity, because in the handshake ceremony there is meaning or values are very large. Handshake is also a form of belief in living life to settle down.

Handshake when the marriage ceremony other than as a manifestation of one's belief in the handshake ceremony as well as an indicator of when the consent qabul take place, given the sentence qabul consent must be recited continuously and without interruption. because usually the mayor or the prince gave a sign with a little "poke" or a small jolt when shaking hands. Although there is therefore no legal basis to explain the implementation of the handshake ceremony Glagah people assume that the handshake ceremony needs to be done in any consent qabul, because according to society's view Glagah shake when the ceremony is an important and very sacred ritual.
