Monogamous marriage is the hope of all people, many people consider monogamous marriage is the ideal marriage. However, the reality is not the least of those who perform polygamous marriages. Where, polygamy is not only its own psychological impact for the wife but also for children, they do not think any further impact will occur in the child's future before committing polygamy, here, as if the children become victims of their parents selfishness, not to mention if their rights are not met. make polygamy alone is a negative psychological impact for children and a wife as well, especially in these polygamous polygamous husband decided to do a roof, where the husband collects wives and their children in one house. as happened in the village district Sonorejo Grogol district Kediri.

Of the above problems, researchers wanted to know what lies behind the practice of polygamy one roof in the village district Sonorejo Grogol district Kediri and the psychological impact of children on a one-stop practice of polygamy and polygamous families a one-stop efforts in fulfilling children's rights.

In this study, researchers used a qualitative descriptive approach later in this essay will illustrate some of the data obtained from the field in the form of interviews, observation or documentation. After that, proceed with the editing process, classification and analysis. In the analysis process is supported by the literature review, as a reference for strengthening the data obtained from the field which would then be presented in descriptive form to make it easier for the reader.

Through this research, suggests that underlying the practice of polygamy one roof is to minimize expenses, and according to them by collecting the wives and children in a house that is to strengthen the relationship between family members and there is a sense of calm in the hearts of husbands with see family members can get together and get along, besides the husband's unpreparedness in providing a home for his wife. Psychological impact arising from this practice is the feeling jealous child on the other brothers and their wives along with his father when his father, then the first child to feel any distress that cannot be expressed with words and eventually lead to behaviors that tend to be negative . Rights in a polygamous one roof can already be met by the parents, especially fathers, because he is the head of household must provide all the needs of children and wives.
