The research method of this study is using the descriptive qualitative data collecting methods by using primary and secondary data. The conducted analysis is using related functions, documents, systematical frameworks that form an internal control system procurement over a raw materials.

On the procurement of raw materials, the result showed that in PG. Poerwodadie in concern with the sugarcane development and those sugarcane farmers, in which the total lands area approximately peaked at 90%. Thus, impacting the sugar production results, in which resulted in qualities as well as quantities. 3) A higher personal awareness were also needed for the increased circumstances on the raw materials itself, which is a part of responsibilities from the working personnel of the sugarcane manufacturers that needs a good cooperation from various parties, therefore the sugarcane procurement increasing program can be achieved currently or in the future. Therefore, it is highly recommended that there are needs for a deeper evaluation, a higher and more serious attention for the benefits of sugarcane procurement raw materials from every working units in PG. Poerwodadie, so that further losses can be minimized properly and reward system can also be used and given to the existing farmers (TR) that can showed a fine quality from the sugarcane raw materials.
