

ABSTRACT

Fadli, NIM, 09210068, 2014. Specialization, Grants, To Oldest child and the Problem In Inheritance Distribution Kateng In the village district. West Praya, Central Lombok. Thesis. Al-akhwal majors Al-syakhsiah, Syariah Faculty, State Islamic University of Maulana Malik Ibrahim Malang. Supervisor: Dr. Zaenul Mahmudi, M.A.

Keywords: Grants, Oldest Son, Inheritance.

The existence of the grant to the eldest son, in this case at a later tend to be problems with the other heirs such as the child who has received a grant sued to get a share of the estate which still exist. Meanwhile, the legacy is still there heirs do not get the part. In addition to the things that have to do with inheritance if he is dead he can also do a gift to a child or while still alive.

The provision in question is a grant or in any other language is called with. This study focused on grants to the eldest son and the Problem in the distribution of the estate. In this study, there is a formulation of the problem, namely: 1) What is the background for the emergence of a tradition penghususan grant to the oldest child in the village Kateng Praya, Central Lombok? 2) How can the problem of specialization in a grant to the oldest child in the village Kateng inheritance Praya, Central Lombok? The main objective of this study is to know the background to the emergence of a tradition specialization grant oldest child in the village of Lombok Praya Kateng Tengah. Untuk know the problems implementing a grant to the oldest child in the village Kateng inheritance Praya, Central Lombok.

This study used several techniques or methods research is field research (field research) or descriptive qualitative. Most of the primary data collected from field observation and direct relationships with informants related to the field of study directly or indirectly. literature and on issues related documentation used as a second ary datasource.

Based on the findings of the study authors comprehensively described in the previous section, with reference to the above formulation of research problems, then the next writer will give a final conclusion as a result of the Status of research grants to the oldest child in the system of the division of the estate in the village west lombok kateng praya middle of the place of treasures grants related to inheritance, to avoid any heirs are not fulfilled its part. There is one form of inheritance which by the public, if the amount of the estate is less than the number of heirs, the children who had received the grant are invited back for deliberation to return th property once in.