Polygamy is a controversial issue of Islam that is never-ending discussed. Justice is the most important requirement in polygamy. Kyai is someone who is viewed by the public has more knowledge about Islamic law. In this study discussed the Jombang Kyai from the aspect of how they can do justice to his wives.

This study focused on the discussion of polygamy conducted by polygamist kyai in Jombang. The emphasis is related to the issue of justice to his wives, concerning to the necessities of life, time sharing, and traveling.

The main objective of this study is to comprehensively understand the concept of justice in the polygamy, and to determine how the application of it's to wives in daily life.

The method used in this study is an empirical study, the acquisition of data that is descriptive qualitative, whereas the approach used is a sociological approach. Most of the data obtained from the primary data, collected directly from the informant. Then, in analyzing the results of the study is supported by secondary data sources.

It can be concluded that polygamist Kyai argue that justice is relative. The implementation of this to their wives in the context of the necessities of life is not must be same because the meaning of equitable is accordance with the wife needs. Then, some Ulama' argue that in the time sharing must be same but some other Ulama' is only conditionally. In the context of travelling, in practically they are doing based on lottery and there is also a flexible.
